AWARD-WINNING DOCUMENTARY
“SANSÓN AND ME” PEELS BACK THE LAYERS OF A YOUNG IMMIGRANT’S JOURNEY FROM ORPHANED MEXICAN CHILD TO INCARCERATION, OPENING NEW SEASON OF PBS’S INDEPENDENT LENS ON SEPTEMBER 19

July 26, 2023

Mexican American Filmmaker Rodrigo Reyes Uses Dramatic Reenactments to Depict Sansón’s Story and Highlights the Systemic Forces and Personal Choices that Envelop Young, Incarcerated Men of Color in America

(San Francisco, CA) July 26, 2023 — A powerful examination of immigration and incarceration in the United States, Rodrigo Reyes’s award-winning documentary “Sansón and Me” will kick off the new season of PBS’s Emmy®-Award-winning documentary-anthology series INDEPENDENT LENS on September 19. “Sansón and Me” is a co-presentation of INDEPENDENT LENS and Latino Public Broadcasting’s VOCES.

The documentary vividly portrays the life of Sansón Noe Andrade, a young immigrant from coastal Mexico. Sansón is currently serving a life sentence in a California prison for his role in a murder that took place when he was 19 years old. Reyes served as Sansón’s interpreter during his trial in 2012, and was struck not only by his earnestness and their common Mexican roots, but also how the systemic failures that plague the immigrant experience in America had touched the life of this young man—with devastating consequences.
Shortly after the trial, Reyes reached out to Sansón in prison to explore making a film about his experience. The result is “Sansón and Me,” which took home the Best Film Award at the 2022 Sheffield DocFest. The film will make its broadcast debut on INDEPENDENT LENS on September 19, 2023 (check local listings), and will also be able to stream on the PBS App.

After exchanging letters with Sansón and visiting him in Pelican Bay State Prison, Reyes began to shape what the film documenting his life would look like. Barred from conducting on-camera interviews in the prison, Reyes turned to reenactments to bring Sansón’s story to life on-screen. He strategically cast Sansón’s family members still living in the coastal town of Tecomán, Mexico, to play key roles in his narrative. Reyes also traces the growth of the friendship he and Sansón formed over the course of making the film and the deep, personal reflections they often shared with one another.

Reyes’s depiction of Sansón’s story—from a childhood stricken with tragedy to the multilayered obstacles he experiences in adolescence and adulthood—illustrates a world defined by borders—between Mexico and the U.S., fact and fiction, and incarceration and freedom. At age 12, Sansón moves from Mexico to California, eventually finds a job and falls in love while avoiding the gang activity that surrounds him, only to go to prison seven years later, where he’s again surrounded by gang activity on the inside. In casting an untrained actor to play teenage Sansón, and with the support of his extended family to play his loved ones, Reyes uses cinematic poetry to capture the harsh realities of immigration, the U.S. prison system, and a man’s journey toward redemption.

“For years I’ve dreamed of telling the story of an immigrant whose life had previously been overlooked and unknown,” said Reyes. “Over the course of a decade, I had the opportunity to learn of Sansón’s story and the pivotal, unfair moments that led him to life in prison. I hope with the film’s broadcast debut, audiences recognize these realities for those who have been left behind and even see themselves in my friend.”

“We’re thrilled to partner with VOCES to open our season ‘Sansón and Me’ which showcases Rodrigo’s innovative and critically-acclaimed documentary filmmaking,” said Lois Vossen, executive producer of INDEPENDENT LENS. “The film traces the poignant story of an incarcerated immigrant, the chilling patterns young men of color face trying to pursue a better future in America, and reveals an intimate understanding of systemic issues and the hope for individual redemption.”
“Sansón and Me” received funding through ITVS’s Open Call funding initiative and is a part of INDEPENDENT LENS’s Stories for Justice initiative, created to spark community conversations and boost the work of people on the front lines of justice reform.
