Directed by Award-Winning Filmmaker Brad Lichtenstein and Executive Produced by Snoop Dogg, the Film Follows Three Strangers Tragically Bound Together Through Gun Violence and a Five-Year Journey Navigating a Flawed Justice System on the Way to Recovery and Forgiveness

Film Marks 27th Emmy® Award for Independent Lens

(San Francisco, CA) Sept. 3, 2022—“When Claude Got Shot,” from filmmaker Brad Lichtenstein, took home the Emmy® Award for Exceptional Merit in Documentary Filmmaking this evening at the 74th Creative Arts Emmy Awards. This accolade marks the 27th Emmy® Award for a documentary that has made its television debut on PBS’s INDEPENDENT LENS.

Lauded by The Hollywood Reporter as “consistently engaging and frequently provocative,” “When Claude Got Shot” premiered at the 2021 SXSW Film Festival and went on to make its television debut on INDEPENDENT LENS in May 2022.

“When Claude Got Shot” follows three strangers tragically bound together by a weekend of gun violence, and a five-year journey to recovery and forgiveness. While visiting his hometown of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, father of three and aspiring attorney Claude Motley is shot in the face by 15-year-old Nathan King during a carjacking gone wrong. Two nights later, King attempts to rob Victoria Davison, who fires her gun in self-defense, partially paralyzing King from the waist down.

At the center of this story is Motley and his arduous recuperation, physically and emotionally, as he persists through multiple surgeries, catastrophic health care bills, and trauma. Over the course of his journey, Motley finds himself torn between desiring punishment for King and grappling with the injustice of mass incarceration that disproportionately affects Black men and boys. While Motley’s narrative is the focal point of the film, Lichtenstein also narrows in on King and his family as they navigate the criminal justice system and face the prospect of decades of imprisonment. Meanwhile, Davison struggles with the emotional repercussions of shooting a 15-year-old boy.

With these interwoven narratives, the documentary provides an intimate and complex perspective on crime, community violence, and justice, leading up to a profound face-to-face meeting between Motley and King.
“Frankly, I wish I never made this film because that would mean my friend, Claude, would never have been shot,” said director Brad Lichtenstein. “But reality is real, so I’m honored not just by this award, but by the trust Claude had in me and our 20 years of friendship—and I’m especially grateful that this recognition will further allow Claude to share his story and wisdom, as we all must try to radically reduce gun violence. I’m also deeply grateful to our team, especially co-producer Santana Coleman, EPs Snoop Dogg and Stick Figure, our editor Michelle Chang, DPs Colin Sytsma and Keith Walker, and my wonderful friend and composer, Vernon Reid.”

“INDEPENDENT LENS congratulates Brad and the entire team behind ‘When Claude Got Shot’ on this much-deserved recognition,” said Lois Vossen, executive producer of INDEPENDENT LENS. “This film sheds light on our flawed criminal justice system, and we hope, through this deeply personal story, audiences are inspired to rethink crime and punishment in this country.”

“When Claude Got Shot” is included in INDEPENDENT LENS’s ongoing Stories for Justice initiative, a public media partnership that aims to spotlight films about systemic racial inequities across America and spark community conversations about justice reform.

The 74th Emmy Awards will be broadcast live from the Microsoft Theater on Monday, September 12, (8:00-11:00 p.m. EDT/5:00-8:00 p.m. PDT) on NBC and will stream live for the first time on Peacock. The Creative Arts Emmy Awards take place at the Microsoft Theater over two consecutive nights on Saturday, September 3, and Sunday, September 4. An edited presentation will be aired Saturday, September 10, at 8:00 p.m. EDT/PDT on FXX.
